Re: SSCRPC Active Transportation Plan for Springfield, IL

Dear Ms. Karrick,

An active transportation plan can serve as an important tool for the Springfield Sangamon County Regional Planning Commission as you work toward planning for a more sustainable, resilient and healthy tomorrow. Developing a plan that prioritizes people at the center of transportation decision making, will work toward advancing goals of safety, equity, and enhanced mobility for users of all ages and abilities. Aligning mobility goals and values from Day 1, will result in a collaborative process, with the outcome of an exciting commitment to advancing active transportation initiatives within the region. Children deserve the opportunity to walk to school, elderly adults deserve the power to access goods and services, and people should be able to incorporate physical activity within their daily commute. An active transportation plan will set this vision for a more active tomorrow.

CMT's team of experienced planners and transportation engineers take great pride in helping communities navigate these goals and identify what does the 'tomorrow' look like that we are trying to achieve. We are committed to healthy, safe, vibrant, and equitable communities, and understand the profound impact a plan such as this may have on shaping the future of the Springfield Sangamon County Region in that way.

TRUSTED EXPERIENCE IN MOBILITY PLANNING

CMT has been trusted to lead several plans that wholly focused on mobility planning or incorporate enhanced access and connections as a key goal within the planning process. Our team of planners is personally passionate about this topic, and has experience with considering the user experience, that go beyond basic safety and connections. We are currently leading, with our trusted partner, SmithGroup, the St. Louis City Mobility Plan, where we are establishing a future mobility vision for St. Louis.

INNOVATIVE APPROACHES TO COMMUNITY ENGAGEMENT

While developing an 'all ages and abilities plan' it is important your input comes for community members that meet that description. Our outward facing engagement process will result in feedback from community members of all ages, as we go out into neighborhoods and experience the daily mobility challenges, as well as identify key opportunities, with people. This experiential approach to engagement will result in not only an equitable planning process but will include an added layer of empathy as we walk and roll alongside people to gather their insight.

Headquartered in Springfield, you can trust that CMT will take great pride in both the process and the outcomes, creating a plan for a better tomorrow in our home. You can trust that the CMT team will deliver. We look forward to bringing our combined expertise in mobility planning, public engagement, infrastructure solutions, and equitable community development in what we know you will find to be a truly holistic and thoughtful perspective.

Sincerely,

Jacquie Knight, ACIP | Project Manager
